San Diego Superior Court Begins Nationwide Search for Executive Officer And Jury Commissioner

The San Diego County Superior Court has announced it is launching a nationwide search for a new Executive Officer and Jury Commissioner. As the second largest court system in the state of California, the San Diego Superior Court is seeking an individual with outstanding leadership and administrative skills. The primary goal of the candidate will be to apply best business practices to maximize efficiency in providing court services. The successful candidate, under the policy direction of the Presiding Judge of the Superior Court, will be responsible for the daily operations of the Court and the management of a staff of more than 1,600 employees.

Presiding Judge John S. Einhorn announced the nationwide search this week to fill the position vacated by Executive Officer Stephen Love saying, "I wish Steve Love the best in any future endeavors. We now begin our search for a new Executive Officer who will continue our Court's leadership position in the California Judiciary."

Love leaves the position after serving three years as the San Diego Court's Executive Officer and Jury Commissioner in San Diego. In the interim, Ray Sorensen, Assistant Executive Officer of the Central Division, will assume the duties once held by Love.
